SHUTTLE- SHORT SYONPSIS

When Jules (Cameron Goodman) and Mel (Peyton List) return from a girls' weekend vacation, they find themselves stranded at the airport, late on a rain-drenched night. Wanting just to get home safe and sound, they board an airport shuttle with a helpful, friendly driver (Tony Curran) for the short trip... that turns out to be anything but safe. From writer-director Edward Anderson, making his directorial debut, comes a terrifying thriller about a night that starts like any other, and a ride home that descends into darkness.

DAVE POWER (Matt)

Dave Power was raised in the town of Rutherford, New Jersey, a suburb just outside of New York City. His interest in acting started in high school and he soon decided to make it his profession.

Upon graduating from high school, he enrolled at Fordham University in Bronx, New York and also took acting classes and workshops in Manhattan. The hard work soon paid off. He found an agent and started auditioning in New York, while still attending college.

In 1999, Dave auditioned for a lead role in Universal's ensemble war drama, "U-571." After numerous auditions, he was cast as 'Tank,' a machinist mate who gets stuck on a German U-boat with his American crew, and must fight to escape the ensuing German Navy. "U-571," which starred Matthew McConaughey, Harvey Kietel, and Bill Paxton, shot for six months in Rome, Italy and Malta. The movie marked Dave's feature film debut. Upon returning to the United States, Dave decided to move to Los Angeles and work full time at pursuing his acting career.

Within a few months, Dave was cast in HBO's epic World War II mini-series, "Band of Brothers." The series, which was produced by Steven Spielberg and Tom Hanks, brought Dave back overseas to film for two months in London. He was cast in the role of Dietrich, the first soldier of the "Band of Brothers" to die. Once he returned to LA, he continued to build his film and television resume. He reunited with his "U-571" co-stars, Matthew McConaughey and Bill Paxton, in Paxton's directorial debut, "Frailty." He then starred alongside Mark-Paul Gosselaar and Marisol Nichols in the NBC movie of the week, "The Princess and the Marine." He has guest starred in over 15 primetime network shows including, "ER," "Six Feet Under," "Malcolm in the Middle," "CSI: Miami," "Crossing Jordan," "One Tree Hill," and "Cold Case." He also appeared alongside Joseph Gordon-Levitt in the critically acclaimed independent feature, "Latter Days." Dave can now be seen in the recently released teen comedy, "Dirty Deeds," alongside Lacey Chabert and Milo Ventimiglia.
